Producer

A winery born from the study of music. Juan José Ledesma worked for years in the vineyards, researching grapevine genetics for the Chilean government. Whilst on his travels he discovered a Malbec vineyard that was over 100 years old. His request for backing to restore this vineyard was declined, so he tried a different angle, the research of the effect of music on wine. Each barrel is plugged with a different tune, playing inside, turning the lees, shaping the wine.Following his discovery of the ancient Malbec vines, Juan José expanded the business to work with other dry grown, ancient ancestral vines grown in Itata and Biobio. As their name suggests, Terroir Sonoro is all about 'terroir and songs'.

Tasting Notes

Pale yellow colour, typical Moscatel aroma, full of fruit and flowers over light honey notes. A sweet attack that evolves into crisp acidity and final bitterness.

Winemaking

"70 years old plantation of Moscatel de Alejandria grapes in a monovarietal, low bush ungrafted and dry farmed vines without any other management than the prunning and mechanical weed control. Granitic soil with a lot of quartz and schist over the soil profile Winemaking Grapes are hand picked and desteemed in a trational but improved zaranda that use plastic material instead "colihue wood" sticks over an open tank. The fermentation occurs in a termo controlled process, between 16 and 18 Celsius degrees with daily punch down "
