Stéphane Ogier represents a new generation in Côte-Rôtie, refining the appellation's style through precision and balance. Since 1997 he has expanded and refined the family vineyards. Planting in long forgotten sites of Seyssuel and hidden parts of Cote-Rotie and Condrieu. He looks for tension in the whites with reds displaying fragrance and finesse alongside structure.

Viticulture

From a 17 hectare estate that covers Côte-Rôtie, Condrieu, St. Joseph and the Seyssuel in the Northern Rhône as well as vineyards on the Plan de Dieu and Visan in the Southern Rhône. The vineyards in the Northern Rhône are on very steep slopes, overlooking the Rhône River and with exposures that range from east through to south. The soils are a mixture of granite, gneiss and mica-schist. The grapes the Condrieu 'Vieilles Vignes de Jacques Vernay' come from a small vineyard in the southern part of the appellation at Saint Pierre de Boeuf. The Viognier vines are planted on loose granite soils and are at a density of 10,000 vines per hectare. The vineyard work is done with manually with minimum intervention and the grapes are harvested by hand.
